The Indian camp meeting at Oakland Park yesterday nothing was said about the formation of a new political party, and no backs were run to the grounds; in other respects it was very similar to the late prohibition camp meeting. The same price of admission was charged at the gate and the same number of men were there to receive and count the money. The merry-go-round perhaps didn't go round so often or so fast, the loop for life had fewer patrons, the boats on the lake were fewer in number and a more solemn and subdued feeling seemed to pervade the large crowd present. The band, composed of six colored and two white men, made excellent music at intervals during the day—albeit some of the tunes might be deemed a little worldly. The Indians—real full-blooded Indians of the plains—staked about over the grounds dressed in gorgeous robes of coffee-sacks and bright-colored bed quilts.
At the appointed hour the speakers seated themselves on the platform and were each introduced in turn by a man dressed in butternut trousers and a dirty shirt, who gave them a good send-off, mentioning with great particularity the number of white people each had massacred, and otherwise extolling their great deeds and bravery as good Indians. Mr. Buffalo Tail, a very red-faced Arapahoe, was the principal talker. No fault could be found with his theology. He spoke in his native tongue and his words were interpreted by a German (who has married into his tribe) to the dirty shirt gentleman, who in turn gave the discourses to the audience in intelligible English. (It is due to our readers to state right here that our reporter was probably the only white person in the audience who thoroughly understood the speaker in his native tongue. According to the interpreter the good Indian said the white people were ahead of the Red men now, but the Great Spirit had made all people alike, and in the great hereafter all would be equal. Now, this is what the man said the Indian said; what the speaker really did say, as well understood by our reporter, was about as follows: "I am awful hungry, and I want some good right away off." Another beautiful sentiment, as interpreted by the dirty shirt man, was really this:
"I know that man (pointing to the empirent of the street railway) He took the promissory at every fair in the Indian Nation for his beauty!" At this juncture Mr. Bull Tail, a full brother of Sitting Bull, with a loud scream, made a lunge at a well-known New York newspaper man, and giving him a brotherly and bear-like hug, claimed him as his long lost brother. He said he had the very features, look and walk of the family.
Tears coursed down the noble Red man's cheeks. One of our oldest citizens assured the Red man that he was mistaken; that he knew the newspaper man well, and that he was born and reared in Decatur. But Mr. B. Tail still claimed him as his long-lost brother, and offered him 3,000 ponies and any number of beautiful squaws to return to his tribe, and make his home with his own kith and kin, where the antelope, etc., etc.
PERSONAL MENTION.
Rev. Dr. Davies preached at the Second M. E. church at Springfield yesterday evening.
M. McDowell, W. G. Canfield, W. A.
Hayden and S. M. Smyser, of Sullivan, spent Sunday in Decatur.
Henry Brown, sexton at St. Patrick's church, is suffering with a severe attack of vertigo.
Nicholas Lanz, of Lincoln, spent Sunday at the city with his family. Nick is doing well in his new location.
Earl J. Christie, an old-time Decatur boy, now living in Brooklyn, N. Y., is in the city washing hands with his old friends.
Sol Ray, engineer at Shellabarger's mill, who has been suffering a week with inflammation of the bowels, is rapidly recovering.
R. N. Ham, 311 S. Water street, is now selling big from his own tree, having gathered a dozen or more up to this date, and there are more coming on.
Miss Gertrude Hull, salutatorian of the class of 1885, Southern Normal University, Carbondale, Ill., is spending a few days with the family. Miss Elizabeth Gastman. Miss Hull's father and mother were classmates of E. A. Gastman in the Normal University at Bloomington twenty-five years ago.
Danville, New York. Mr. Melville Coulter, brother-in-law of Rev. D. D. Judg J. W. Wilkin, of this city, was severely injured by a stroke of lightning at his home in Crawford county. His barn and house were struck by lightning, and his grain and farm implements were burned. Rev. Wilkin has just returned from visiting Mr. Coulter and family, and hopes may yet see him. A barbed wire struck the heroine of the daughter, being burned to death in his barn.
Tragedy near Tuscola.
During a German picnic and reunion near Tuscola, the other day, at the close of the day's sports, a fight arose among some of the winners over the distribution of prizes and a fight ensued, during which Max Rier, of Arcola, and Pete Cruce, of Tuscola, were terribly cut with a razor in the hands of Billy Appleton, a barber of Arcola. Rier will die. Appleton escaped and cannot be found.
Horse and Buggy stolen.
Albert Park, living four miles west of Decatur, attended the Bogardus exhibition shooting at Oakland Park on Saturday afternoon, leaving his horse and buggy hitched to the fence on the outside. When Park got ready to return home he missed his property and at once started in pursuit. He found the buggy near his home, where the thief had left it, and the horse and harness were nearby.
Since that time nothing has been heard of either animal or thief.
Larceny of a Ring.
F. C. Stewart, who has been signing in our police courts under various charges for several weeks, was arrested on Saturday evening by Officer Holmuck on a charge of stealing a gold ring at Champaign. An officer from Champaign will take charge of Stewart, and it may be possible that his Decatur friends will not get to see him again before the snow lies.

ON THE BANKS OF THE HUDSON.
At last we find ourselves on the banks of the Hudson, the home of our childhood, and here amid the shadows of an old wood, with the silence broken only by the soft and whis-perings of the old pine trees above us, I pen these lines. Here I dreamed and played in the happy by-gone. Here within sight and sound of this woodland my ancestors for generations have lived, and here they lie buried. All of our hearts have such memories, and often in the busy years of life they come stealing back upon us with thrilling power.
About sixteen miles to the southwest of me, as the birds flies, lifting their sunbeams nearly four thousand feet into a cloudless azure sky, rises the Catskill Mountains. We spent two days there during the past week. No finer mountain scenery is to be had in this country, and at the season of the year they are thronged with tourists from all parts of the world. The dining-room at the Kataerick house seats 1500 people, and while we were there it was usually full. From here the eye ranges over seven different states, while a landscape of more than ten thousand square miles is spread out at your feet. This landscape is not mountainous, but is constantly changing under the shifting clouds, the changing atmosphere and the different angles in which the sun's rays fall upon it. Of course the great sight here, as on nearly all mountains, is to see the sun rise. The morning we were there it rose clear, but after half an hour passed under a cloud. The valley was filled with mist or clouds of varying height and swiftness of movement. Far to the eastward they were piled up like mountains and lay calm and motionless, while nearer to us the scurried was broken like a sea in a storm. As the sun rose this mighty mass changed from color to color, the cloud mountains were first snow white which shortly changed to salmon yellow and then to pink, while the cloud hills were all adame with the varied hues of the rainbow. As the sun rose higher it made a golden pathway through that enchanted cloudland, leading up to itself. Every earthly sight and sound was hushed and stilled. We were pinched alone in the heavens. The earth was below us. All the sixths we beheld were pure and beautiful. A thousand angels seemed to be beckoning us to the life and land that is better. It was like the drawing near of a redeemed soul to the pinnacles of heaven.
You're truly,
Geo. B. Vossler.
